WAR DECLARED ON JAPAN

PRESIDENT AFFIXES SIGNATURE TO CONGRESS RESOLUTION AT 1:10 PACIFIC TIME

Senate Approves Declaration Unanimously While House Votes 388 To 1 For Measure; U. S. Will Triumph—"So Help Us God"

WASHINGTON, (AP)—President Roosevelt at 1:10 p. m., Pacific Time today signed the joint resolution of Congress declaring the existence of a state of war with the Japanese empire.

The resolution, passed by Congress, was put into effect by the President's signature just three hours and thirty-seven minutes after President Roosevelt went before a joint session of both houses.

He pledged that the United States would triumph over a treacherous Japan—"So help us God."

The Senate passed the resolution twenty-one minutes after Mr. Roosevelt's closing words echoed through the house corridors. The Senate vote was unanimous in support of the resolution, 82 to 0.

Twelve minutes later, the House voted 388 to 1 for the resolution with only Representative Jeanne Rankin, R., Montana, voting against the move, as she did in 1917.

The war all ready was more than 24 hours old and was still accompanied by a barrage of reports of further Japanese raids and new damage to American naval and air forces.

'41 Committeemen And Administrative Aides Continue To Serve

Committeemen and administrative aides of the county Agricultural Conservation Association were re-elected and re-appointed at the annual meeting of the association held Friday at the Superior Court Room in the courthouse.

Following the general meeting, the committee met and organized by re-election of the same officers and re-appointed George H. Volz as secretary and Mrs. Doris Liddicoet as treasurer.

The only change in the 1941 set-up was the election of Max Bollman as second alternate to the committee, succeeding Jerome Strickland, resigned.

Louis Enzler was re-elected chairman, Dan M. Bassi, vice-chairman; Alburn Veerkamp, third member; and Clarence Wilkinson, first alternate.

Farm Advisor Lilley spoke briefly on the "farming for defense" program and the 1942 program in the association was discussed.

FOUR PAINFULLY HURT IN 2 WRECKS LAID TO SLIPPERY ROAD

Sunday and Monday morning there were two separate wrecks in the American River canyon which are attributed to winter driving conditions.

Victims in the Sunday morning incident, which took place a short distance west of Pacific House when the car skidded, were Harry Garibaldi, Rose Garibaldi, John Dettrino and Claudina Dettrino, all of Sacramento. They were all removed to the capital city. Their car, badly damaged, was taken to a local wrecking yard.

The Monday morning incident, which took place east of Riverton, involved a car driven by J. H. Stearns, of Bijou. The only serious injury sustained by Mrs. Nora Alderrey, whose home is in Denver, Colorado, who was a passenger in the Stearns car. She was removed to Placerville Sanatorium. It was reported she was not seriously hurt.

Mrs. Mary Morrison was here from Sacramento on Sunday, visiting her brother, Joe Bildeaux, and other relatives and friends.

Baer's Store Sale Okehed

Actual Transfer Is Scheduled To Take Place This Afternoon

In a hearing Monday morning in Superior Court, the court approved the proposed sale of Max Baer's Store by the executrix of the estate of Max Baer, deceased, to the firm of Levison and Schneider, of San Francisco.

The petition for approval of the sale was presented by Attorney Thomas Maul in behalf of the executrix, Mrs. Edith Baer.

Following the court's action, Nat Wolf, representing the purchasers, said that the sale was to be consummated on Monday afternoon. The new owners, he said, have made plans for a special merchandising event to start on Friday of this week.

NAVY CALLS RESERVES TO REPORT AT ONCE FOR DUTY

WASHINGTON, (AP)—Young men who joined armed services such as the U. S. Naval Reserves as recently as last Saturday received telegrams before 8 a. m. today to report for service at once.

The war department announced that the army will be expanded to 2,000,000 men as rapidly as possible—there are 1,600,000 men in it now—and the figure may go even higher within a few days if it is decided to recall selective service men and national guardsmen who were recently discharged.

DEBS GARMS, OUTFIELDER, SOLD TO SACRAMENTO BY PIRATES

PITTSBURGH, (AP)—The Pittsburgh Pirates announced today that Debs Garms, veteran outfielder who won the National League batting championship in 1940, has been sold to the Sacramento club of the Pacific Coast League.

CASUALTY INQUIRIES FLOOD WAR, NAVY HEADQUARTERS

WASHINGTON, (AP)—The Navy and War Departments today received numerous inquiries from over the country as to casualties in the Japanese attacks—particularly in the Hawaiian Islands area.

The Navy advised against sending of individual inquiries at this time. It said that casualties would be announced and families notified as quickly as information is received.

Public Co-Operation Is Asked

The office of the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company has issued the following announcement:

The present emergency today is heavily taxing our long distance facilities. We will appreciate your cooperation in your not making other than the most urgent long distance calls. We ask this in order that our long distance lines may, in all cases be readily available to the Army, Navy and other branches of our Government.

It Is War, Let's Keep Our Heads!

By action of the Congress upon the recommendation of the President, the United States is at war with Japan.

Following the official, semi-official and other reports of the treacherous attack upon the Pacific outposts of the United States by Japan on Sunday, no other eventuality could be expected.

We have a job to do, and every citizen of the United States must and will accept his share in the task to be accomplished;—a task to be accomplished with success.

Supporting the war effort to the utmost, there is a special duty with which the civilian population is charged.

Individually, we must, each of us, remain away from the dams, reservoirs and other public works and utilities whose continuing regular operation is essential to the public welfare.

We must give all support possible to the furtherance of the war aims as they are developed and directed by our national leaders. The ways in which we may contribute this support will be revealed to us as the support is needed.

We must remain calm, confident in our officials and in their leadership.

3,000 CASUALTIES REPORTED IN ATTACK ON HAWAII

About 1,500 Fatalities, Says White House Statement Reporting The Loss Of "One Old Battleship;" Defense Action Continuing

WASHINGTON, (AP)—Casualties on the Hawaiian Island of Oahu in yesterday's Japanese air attack will amount to about 3,000, including about 1,500 fatalities, the White House announced today.

(The maximum casualties for any one 24-hour period in London during the heavy air raids were about 1,200—450 killed and 750 injured. That would indicate that the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor was exceptionally intense or else the bombs landed on barracks or some other place where many persons were concentrated.)

The White House confirmed the loss in Pearl Harbor of "one old battleship" and a destroyer, which was blown up.

The White House statement said: "American operations against the Japanese attacking force in the neighborhood of the Hawaiian Islands are still continuing. A number of Japanese planes and submarines have been destroyed."

"The damage caused to our forces in Oahu in yesterday's attack appears more serious than at first believed."

"In Pearl Harbor itself one old battleship has capsized and several other ships have been seriously damaged."

"One destroyer was blown up. Several other small ships were seriously hurt. Army and Navy fields were bombed with the resulting destruction of several hangars. A large number of planes were put out of commission."

"A number of bombers arrived safely from San Francisco during the engagement—while it was under way. Reinforcements of planes are being rushed and repair work is under way on the ships, planes and ground facilities."

"Guam, Wake and Midway Islands and Hong Kong have been attacked. Details of these attacks are lacking."

"Two hundred Marines—all that remain in China—have been interned by the Japanese near Tientsin."

"The total number of casualties on the Island Oahu are not yet definitely known but, in all probability, will amount to about 3,000. Nearly half are fatalities, the others being wounded. It seems clear from the report that many bombs were dropped in the city of Honolulu, resulting in a small number of casualties."

A major naval battle was reported west of Hawaii, with the American fleet attempting to destroy enemy warships and airplanes that blasted Pearl Harbor naval base and Honolulu on Sunday.

A fierce land battle was in progress on the northeast coast of the Malay states where British defense forces attacked Japanese troops which landed on the beaches despite air bombing and machine gun fire.

About 30,000 Japanese troops in 60 vessels, escorted by warships, were believed to have landed on the Malay coast.

Japanese invasion forces bombed and shelled Bangkok crashed into Thailand by land and sea and were reported in a British broadcast to have forced that government to capitulate.

Waves of Japanese bombers battered northern, central and southern areas of the Philippine Islands.

Aircraft Warning Service Lookouts Take Their Posts As California Gears For Defense; State Guard Unit Stands By For Call

PUPILS HEAR WAR ADDRESS

Radio Brings Message Of President To Students In Assembly

The student body of the county high school, assembled in the school auditorium Monday morning, heard by radio the address of President Franklin D. Roosevelt Monday morning before the joint session of the national House of Representatives and the Senate.

Through the miracle of radio, this historic occasion was brought to the students and faculty members, making the day one which the students and their teachers may long remember.

Before the President's voice was heard, District Attorney Henry S. Lyon addressed the student body at the invitation of Principal B. E. Larson.

Mr. Lyon, chairman of the county Council of Defense, impressed upon the pupils the importance of avoiding anything in the nature of hysteria or panic.

Adequate provision has been made by the national officials and behind them, by the state officials, and behind them, by the county for a proper attention to the public welfare, he declared.

CHARLES T. CAPPLEMAN GETS JAIL TERM ON BAD CHECK CHARGE

Charles T. Cappleman, charged with issuing a worthless check, was sentenced to four months in the county jail on Monday after he had pleaded guilty at an arraignment before Judge George H. Thompson, in Superior Court.

District Attorney Henry S. Lyon presented testimony that the defendant had been in previous similar trouble at Los Angeles, and reported an inquiry from Placer County concerning the disposition of the present case.

In the defendant's behalf, Attorney Thomas Maul brought out that the defendant had been drinking at time he issued a check for $25 to Alfred Brady, at whose request the complaint was issued.

Twenty-four hour patrols are now in effect in these areas and the public not having legitimate business within the vicinity of the various works, will be expected to remain away from those works.

The Aircraft Warning Service has been established throughout the county in co-operation with the state Council of Defense.

The 18th Provisional Company of the California State Guard is on an "alert" status.

El Dorado County is swinging into a war-time schedule.

"The public can best co-operate in the defense work by avoiding hysteria in any form," said District Attorney Henry S. Lyon, chairman of the Council of Defense.

"Steps have been taken to guarantee the protection of essential services throughout the county and, I am informed, throughout the state."

"The 'isms' against which we are opposed endeavor to profit from the confusion which arises following the general circulation of sensational reports which are usually without foundation. We should remember this. Have confidence in our leaders and avoid anything but a calm consideration of the facts and a proper attention to the task which is to be done."

Battleships Aren't Built By Rule Of Thumb

A MODEL HULL, forerunner of a real man o' war, is shown above as it is being tested with ballast to make it ride in the same manner as the full sized ship in service. An intricate overhead carriage records stresses and strains, helping engineers plan big ship construction.

Timken Bearings Help Test Ships For Stress, Strain In Model Form.

Those slick men o' war which are guarding both the Atlantic and Pacific shores of the United States were not made by rule of thumb.

It is no mere accident that they are able to ride out the most severe storms and still maintain an uninterrupted lookout for the enemy.

Before production is started on these rulers of the waves, every type ship is built in miniature and the models are proved and tested in large model basins.

One of the most widely known of these test basins is located at Carderock, Md. It consists of a basin of water 1,300 feet long. A large carriage running on rails located on either side of the basin tests models of naval craft at speeds up to 20 miles an hour.

Mounted on the carriage are instruments which accurately measure the stresses and strains imposed on the models as they glide down the basin.

It is essential that this huge carriage move smoothly and steadily on its track to give accurate recordings on the measuring instruments. Timken tapered roller bearings in the carriage wheels and other vital moving parts make this smooth travel possible.

Besides bringing in good money, many farmers are finding that evergreen plantings do a fine job of protecting hilly soil from erosion.

The soil conservation service has been experimenting with different types of evergreens to determine which will do the job of erosion control and still bring the most money at Christmas time.

DIARY of a BEAUTY AUTHORITY by Helena Rubinstein

In this week's column, the world-famous beauty authority, Helena Rubinstein, prescribes a very simple, inexpensive corrective treatment for women who have dry skins.

Sometimes when I am present at an international gathering, I like to play a little game and try to guess the nationalities of the women present by their complexions. I can frequently pick out the women who come from Mediterranean or Latin American countries by their dark skins, often inclined to be either excessive oily or excessively dry due to the climate they live in. British women usually have clear, high-colored, ruddy complexions. The American women I can usually detect at once—for, at a rough guess, I would say that nine out of ten American women have dry skins.

There are several reasons why dry skin is so prevalent in America: The American diet for one thing, with its low percentage of fats and oils; the dry temperate climate; the steam-heated rooms in which American women spend so much of their time. All of these are contributing factors.

Today, as I walked down Fifth Avenue, I could not help noticing how many beautifully-dressed and otherwise perfectly groomed women suffer from serious complexion faults. A dry skin is a grave beauty fault first of all, because it is the type of skin which is most likely to wrinkle. Furthermore, it becomes scaly and parched very easily and is usually lifeless and sallow-looking. A woman who has this type of skin must take extra precautions to prevent a prematurely "aging" skin.

The treatment for this type of skin is really not complicated at all and even a very lazy woman could hardly object to following this simple procedure: In the morning, cleanse your skin with a rich, concentrated cream, allowing it to remain on while you bathe and dress, so that your skin can receive the lubrication it needs. Then pat a milky skin lotion into your skin to finish your morning treatment.

In the evening, cleanse again with your rich cream, to remove all the dust and grime and to take away any parched, dry feeling. Combine this cleansing with a quick massage, moving the cream over the surface of your face with broad upward and outward movements. Remove cream with tissues and pat on skin lotion. Then apply a film of special night cream to guard your skin against dryness and flakiness while you sleep.

The dry skin is especially sensitive to climate extremes and should be carefully guarded from too much heat or too much cold. Protect it in the winter from cold winds by wearing a foundation film beneath your make-up and in the summer, with special sunproof protectives.

If you have any questions regarding your own skin problems, Madame Rubinstein will be glad to answer them personally if you will address your inquiry to Helen Rubinstein, in care of this paper.

"THE MANDARIN HOUSE MURDERS" by Van Wyck Mason

CHAPTER I

Scrambling to his feet, Hugh North reached the hall just in time to have the report of a heavy revolver buffet him in the face. He paused, semi-dazed—in that narrow hallway the shot had been deafening as the discharge of a fieldpiece.

"Get 'em!" he panted. Chao Ku was poised in the doorway of 1805 with a ponderous old-fashioned revolver raised, from under the big front sight of which a wispy of gray smoke curled upwards. Even at this moment the little Chinese's round face was devoid of expression.

"Tajem! Tajem! You hurt?" "Never mind me! Get those men!" "One have got. Major Kilgour, soldier man pursue other."

His nostrils stung by the bitter reek of burnt powder, North plunged down the hall towards a figure lying slumped in an odd half sitting position against the corridor's neat gray wall. The fellow was moaning while feebly clawing at the bosom of a shirt already soggy with arterial blood and his close clipped head awayed in small, desperate circles. He raised dazed eyes when North bent over him.

"Why did you—"
 But Marya Gallian's hysterical screams began to make the corridor resound.

"Shut her up!" North rasped. "Who are you?" "Johann Metzger — Ich — ich sterbe."

"Why did you come here?" North was speaking, fluent German, but the dying man only stared stupidly at his own crimsoned fingers.

"Your friend knew Marya Gallian?" Faint as the whisper of a duck's wing in an autumn sky came the words. "Ja, Daisy has betrayed—"

Then a strong hemorrhage extinguished the last spark of vitality. Footsteps pattered and North glimpsed Marya Gallian speeding towards the stairs. Chao Ku, however, was after her with a speed amazing in so round and short-legged a man and caught her just as half dressed guests commenced to peer timidly out of their doorways.

"What's happened?" "Oh Lord, look! Fred, that man's hurt!" "No, he's dead! How awful!" Help! Police!

North leaped to the telephone in room 1805.

"Desk, quick!" A voice, absurdly normal in this crowded moment, said, "Yes, sir?" "There's been a murder on the thirteenth floor. Block all entrances! Allow no one to leave."

North hoped he had moved in time and bitterly he lamented the precious seconds necessarily lost over Johann Metzger.

Twenty minutes later North learned the unpleasant fact that the man called Kurt had successfully eluded Kilgour and Spurr. Though The Mandarin House was thoroughly searched, not a trace of him could be found.

Another disappointing feature was that the body of Johann Metzger yielded no evidence of the least significance. Apparently effective precautions had been taken against carrying identification.

Just who and what had Marya

Gallian betrayed? The question began to gnaw at North's subconscious mind like an imprisoned rat. To make things even more difficult her manner, may her very personality, had undergone a complete transformation. Vanished was the sprightly, well bred young woman of the Cercle Sportif, leaving in her stead a sullen, hard-eyed creature who only shivered and shook her head when addressed. Obviously she had been terrified by the turn of events.

In a private office at the Central Police Station, North poured the distraught young woman a stiff tot of cognac and waited patiently until at least a measure of her ghastly pallor had disappeared; only then did he approach his objective by advancing on a tangent.

"Why did you tell me you'd never been to China before?" "I haven't."

"Miss Gallian, that's absurd and you know it."
 "Well then, what if I have?" "You were then known under another name?"

In a pathetic attempt at casualness the wan creature dabbed aside a stray curl. "I have you didn't pay any attention to what that dreadful man in the green uniform said—"

"You haven't answered my question."
 "I've never had reason to change my name."

"Why did you return to China with Luther Adams?" "As I told you, my fiancé has business here."

"Luther Adams and King are the same person?" Marya Gallian shrugged. "Why deny it?"

"It's a peculiar sort of business which requires a man to change his name."
 "I don't know anything about his business."

"Did you recognize either of the men who lay dead?" "No. How could I?" Her reply was too emphatic to be credited.

"What about Dave Spurr?" Into her eyes crept a look so puzzled that North made a mental note of it. "I met him in Hong Kong once. He's a low sort—they say he'll fight for anybody, do anything if you pay him enough. I can't understand his being at the Mandarin. I'm certain Luther didn't invite him there."

"Sure you didn't communicate with him?" "No!"

North debated mentioning the cables between Adams and Wang's artillery officer, but thought better of it. So Adams had been undertaking negotiations behind his fiancée's back? Well, well!

"How about another Cognac? Not a cigarette, then?" "Thank you. Mein Gott, what a night!"

In flawless German, North suddenly returned to the attack. "You recognized Johann Metzger?"

"Ja, toh—no, no. I don't know him. I've already said I didn't." "Now that's odd, Miss Gallian, because Metzger knew you very well. He also said something not exactly complimentary." Suddenly inspired, North launched a chance shaft. "He told me that you had betrayed him and Kurt."

Her newly returned color receding, Marya Gallian clutched the chair arms with such force as to whiten her knuckle bones.

"That's a lie!" she gasped. "I never did anything of the sort."
 "But you were badly frightened when you saw Metzger."

"You imagine it."
 "Oh nonsense! Come now. Who is this Kurt and what is he to you?"

Stubborn lines dominated the haggard but still handsome features of the young woman in green. "I tell you, I don't know!"

Smothering his exasperation, North tried another tack. "In that case, you won't object to helping me find him?"

"What do you mean?" "In tomorrow's Daily News I'll run a personal in your name, asking Kurt for a rendezvous. All you have to do is to appear and I'll—"

"No! I will not do it."
 North did not raise his voice but its quality made her shiver when he said, "I think you will, Miss Gallian."

"How dare you order me about!" Was there a trace of desperation now added to her fear? "I'm leaving at once." She actually got up, gathering her evening cape about her.

"Sorry, but you're staying here as a material witness."
 Her face crumpled momentarily.

"You can only keep me a few hours on such a charge—I'll leave Shanghai in the morning."

Captain North's good nature remained unruffled and he even twisted his black bow tie into a straighter position as he drawled, "I sincerely hope you will, Miss Gallian; then I can have you arrested."

"Arrest me? For what?" Her tone was shrill. "You can't arrest me. I've done nothing."

"You labor under a delusion, my dear young lady. Long before you are ready to leave the International Settlement I will present the police with a Federal warrant for your arrest. In case you've forgotten the fact, may I remind you that such a warrant can be served any place outside of the International Settlement?"

"A warrant? Why—why, you're crazy!"

"Possibly. But nevertheless there are penalties for criminal espionage even in an easy-going country like the United States. Don't you think you'd do better to stay in Shanghai and lend me your valuable assistance? I do want to find that sportsman with the flashlight."

"Very well, then, I will stay. But," she added vindictively, "I refuse to help you."
 "Indeed? Then remember that if you will not go to Kurt, it is always possible to bring Kurt to you. And since I don't think you'd enjoy meeting him, I'll give you some time to reconsider my request."

An expression of terror was still on her features when he bowed and with a pleasant, "Auf Wiedersehen, Gnadige Frau," left her alone again.

TB Tactics

Knowing the "tactics" of tuberculosis—the disease always deals its heaviest blows during times of stress—the Christmas Seal Sale is being held in England as usual. Due to conditions, Canada printed the Seals and sent them over months ago. The American associations are doing everything in their power to prevent tuberculosis from getting out of control in this country. There is a deeper meaning than ever before in the plea Buy and Use Christmas Seals!

THE DANCE

Incomplete reports on the dance given Saturday night to assist in raising funds to send a team to the Columbus ABC in March indicate the affair was a success. It is reported that admissions at the door were sufficient to meet expenses and that "whatever the advance ticket sale amounts to" will augment the "On to Columbus" fund.

ON THE ROAD

Two men's and one women's team went to Pittsburg Sunday and gave a good accounting of El Dorado County bowling. The "county" team lost two 3-game matches by narrow margins and is said to have rolled 2,700 or better in each match, losing one by eleven pins and the other by four pins.

The girls won their three-game match and a second men's team won and lost a three-game match.

HANGTOWN LEAGUE

There is going to be quite a fuss this evening between the Bank of America and the Raffles. They are both parties to a three-way tie for second position in the league and so their meeting will be on the "for keeps" basis.

The Forest Service, which also shares second position, meets the Collins Studebakers, who are equipped with hill-holders, and the third match of the night sends the last place Cannon Chevrolets against the first place Beaches;—and don't laugh! The Chevies did things to the Forest Service last week.

The hostess can relax, certain that no files or staling process can attack her cakes and cheeses, if she is equipped with cake and cheese covers as Christmas gifts. Bell shaped, these may be had made out of metal, glass or plastic, with knob-by handles for convenient lifting.

Some of the heavy buying is attributed to fears that defense priorities will limit the amount of consumer goods that will be available for Christmas, 1942.

Groom 25—Bride 70

Declaring that their marriage "was made in heaven," Raymond Vann, 25, theological student, and 70-year-old Miss Lou Wilkins, Baptist missionary, are shown after their wedding in Fort Worth, Tex. The couple met ten years ago, but it was not until ten days before their marriage that romance occurred to them. Vann was a member of the track team and a tennis star at Conners College, Warner, Okla.

GEORGETOWN NATIVE SUBJECT OF SKETCH IN SACRAMENTO NEWSPAPER'S SERIES ON COMMUNITY LEADERS

A native son of Georgetown was the subject for "Who's Who in Sacramento," in the Monday morning issue of The Sacramento Union. "Who's Who in Sacramento" is a series of sketches on the life of men prominent in the capital city and concerning Omer E. Cheek, the Monday morning Union said:

"After nearly 30 years, selling real estate is still the most exciting business in the world to Omer E. Cheek, and he feels it always will be. Born in 1891 at Georgetown, El Dorado county, where his father, now nearly 80, still actively operates a gold mine, he attended El Dorado county elementary schools, went to high school and business college in Napa.

"First job in Sacramento was with the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph company, but he left it at the first opportunity to enter the real estate business with the old Train-or-Desmond company. . . he was with the Wright & Kimbrough company for 10 years, later was sales-manager at the Morrissey company. . . has been in business for himself during the last nine years, with offices in the Forum building. . . promoted Cheek's village, a suburban development near Sacramento army air depot.

"He was president of the Sacramento Real Estate board in 1930-31 and was a director of the California Real Estate association. . . formerly was a director of the YMCA.

Delbert Wilkinson, Bob Sheldon, Earl Fleming, Jack Butts, Don MacInlin and Virgil Sneed were among the men of Company D, 15th Engineers, who were here during the weekend from Camp San Luis Obispo, visiting relatives and other friends.

James Henry Dixon, 32, of Youngs, and Lilly Ida Maxwell, 19, of Hayward, on Saturday were granted license to wed at the office of County Clerk Arthur J. Koltzke.

CALIFORNIA FARM PARADE

By United Press

If you're looking for a tip on how to get rich quick, show the grand champion steer at the international livestock show. This year's jackpot from the sale of the top animal amounted to some $3200 and went to Purdue university.

The auction of the winning steer is about the most colorful part of the international exposition. When it starts out at a dollar a pound, it's sure to get up into the thousands of dollars before the sale is made. And when there's that much money involved, it's bound to be interesting. It ended at $3.30 per pound.

The sale price of all prize livestock except the grand champion was higher this year than last.

It's interesting to note that this year's grand champion was a cross-bred Angus-Shorthorn. Livestock men who favor cross-breeding over pure breeds will have something to talk about for a while.

The Christmas tree business is rapidly growing into an important source of farm income. Of course, people have been selling evergreens at Christmas for a long time. But in recent years, farmers have been making more and more of a definite business of raising trees, holly, laurel and what not for the holiday market.

The cash return has been considerable. The department of agriculture says income from this source will put over $10,000,000 in the farmers' pocket this year.

One farm family in Maryland has a contract to decorate the home town each season. They spend most of November and December making the necessary decorations to make their town a stand-out Christmas attraction.

American-built bombers now in production have higher average speed, greater bomb-carrying capacity and longer range than any of the bombers in regular use by the European belligerents, the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce reports. Pioneered in the United States to meet hemisphere defense needs, the fast, long-range bomber has become a major factor in World War II. For example, European bombers such as the British Blenheim IV and the German Junkers Ju 88 have maximum speeds ranging from 295 to 317 mph. At least four U. S. bombers are officially credited with top speeds approximating 325 mph. Two of these bombers—long range type—have an operating radius exceeding anything built abroad, and no bomber in the world has anywhere near the estimated range (7,750 miles) and the bomb-carrying capacity (18 tons) of the Douglas B-19 super-bomber.

Restrictions on military information preclude exact performance data, but in four years, the average speed of bombers has increased 71 miles an hour; the average weight is nearly twice as great; the maximum range has been extended nearly 900 miles and altitudes have gone up more than 3,000 feet.

Thus research laboratories of the American aviation industry are winning this nation new mastery in the air. From behind their portals, despite the restrictions of military secrecy, comes information about discoveries that have profound military and economic implications—discoveries that led Robert A. Lovett, Assistant U. S. Secretary of War for Aviation, to declare recently:

"Some of the sweetest stuff you've ever seen is on the way. Within three months American aeronautical equipment with military loads will have no equal at high altitudes anywhere else in the world!"

Bearing out his prediction, four brand new military airplanes have flashed across American skies within recent weeks—heralds of even faster, more deadly types to come.

Republic Thunderbolt: First single-engine pursuit to be designed for the U. S. Air Corps around a 2,000-horsepower radial engine. Bigger than any single-engine fighter now in service, the heavily armed Thunderbolt will reach altitudes that had been considered virtually unattainable.

North American Apache: In this pursuit ship is incorporated the familiar low wing, a new type of airfoil design with tremendous speed potentialities.

Vultee Vengeance: A dive bomber described as a "weapon of retaliation with performance better than even the most modern of its type." Designed for the British, the Vengeance incorporates all the lessons learned in Europe's aerial war.

Bell P-39D: An improved version of the Bell Airacobra, the famous cannon-carrying fighter. The new Bell pursuit ship is said to be the most heavily armed single-seater American fighter yet built.

well, that he planted mulberry trees and built cocoeneries for silk worms hoping to establish a silk industry. A large tree was planted whose wood was to be used for fine cabinet work. This may be the beautiful Japanese elm that stands beside the house today, called "ka-oki." It is the largest tree of its kind in the entire state, tree experts have told Mrs. Louis Veerkamp. But all of these enterprises failed. With their oranges, the Japanese did have a measure of success. Some of them were marketed and were said to be "large, juicy and sweet." Two of the orange trees still stand in the south garden near the elm tree.

After the repeated failure of their "crops" the Japanese colony disbanded, but here and there it has left its marks on county history. Photographs of some of the colonists are in the family album of Egbert Veerkamp. One boy who was educated in the United States returned to Japan to make a name for himself; one man remained as the personal servant of the Veerkamps. Upon his return to Japan Schnell was beheaded for squandering the Emperor's money.

In the Louis Veerkamp home are two mementos of the colony—a Japanese sword and a handsome silk banner embroidered in black and gold. Most of us in the county have at one time or another visited the grave of Okei who was a member of the colony, and whom, it is said, was the first Japanese to die on foreign soil. A footpath across the Veerkamp fields leads to the grave in a little sheltered grove. It is

Around The House

With ANN COMFORT

The Veerkamp home and Gold Hill have had a long association, yet the first Veerkamp home was a half mile below the present one. Francis Veerkamp who crossed the plains in 1852 with his wife and little son Henry and whose interesting story is told in Sliot's History of El Dorado County took an active part in the town's development. He saw those two buildings that are now roofless shells erected. One of them constructed of sandstone blocks which were hewn by hand cost $16,000. In the early days there were two hotels at Gold Hill, the Gold Hill House opened by Rankin, and in 1854 leased by Mrs. R. T. Kimble and the Steve Hill House which is the present Veerkamp home. For a time Francis Veerkamp played his part in the Comstock boom hauling from Folsom to Virginia City but it was land that attracted him. He was one of the first men to make agricultural history in our county and his descendants have continued to make it.

Just when the house known today as the Louis Veerkamp house was built is not known. Whether Steve Hill himself built it I have not been able to discover but he lived here and planted fruit trees at the same time that they were first planted at Coloma. The fertile meadows of Gold Hill were ideal for fruit and farmlands. The tobacco fields of William Vernon bore fine specimens; the vineyards of Hugh Newell became famous for their Red and Catawba wines. Steve Hill sold his house and farm to Mr. Charles Graner who, in turn, sold it to the Dutchman Schnell who brought his colony of Japanese here. It came into the possession of the Veerkamps in 1873. What is said to have been the first Beure Bosc tree, Mr. Egbert Veerkamp tells me, was in this orchard and people would come from near and far to get grafts from it. Francis Veerkamp always interested in education gave a substantial sum for the establishment of the Gold Hill school which was destroyed by a cyclone in 1897.

The Veerkamp house is remarkably like some of those New England homes that have withstood the vicissitudes of time and chance. Facing grand old Mount Thompson, surrounded by meadows that are full of repose and freshness the house combines the best of the old features with the newer comforts of modern equipment.

Associated with the Veerkamp house is one of the most colorful

In Memory of

Okei

Aged 19 years

(A Japanese Girl)

Looking at the solitary grave, for a moment we can forget all racial feelings and breathe a sigh of pity for young Okei lying so far from home and kin. Already legends have begun to cluster about her story. It has been said she was a princess and that she was a butterfly type of girl with fascinating manners. Ten years ago the Japanese writer Kimura visited the grave with the intention of making Okei the heroine of a novel.

This Japanese episode has its part in the romantic story of our county.

Mrs. Louis Veerkamp sends in two recipes that find favor in this historical house:

Lemon Cake Pudding

Four small eggs or 3 large ones, juice and rind of 2 lemons, 1 cup sugar; 1 cup milk, pinch of salt, 1 tablespoon flour, slightly rounding. Mix flour, salt and sugar and add lemon juice and rind, then add well beaten egg yolks and milk all at once. Fold in beaten whites. Bake in a pyrex dish set in a pan of hot water in a very low oven for 1 hour.

Kansas Ginger Bread (Soft)

1/2 cup sugar, 1 cup sorghum (molasses), 2 1/2 cups flour—sift before measuring, 1 teaspoon each cinnamon, ginger and cloves, 2 eggs, 1/2 cup drippings, 1 cup boiling water, 2 teaspoons soda.

Mix sugar, drippings and eggs then add flour, soda and spices which have been sifted together, add sorghum and last the boiling water a little at a time. Bake very slowly. This should be a very thin batter to have it light.

SALMON FALLS MAN TO BE LAID AT REST THURSDAY MORNING

The funeral services for Ernest Brown, of Salmon Falls, will be held Thursday morning at ten o'clock at St. Patrick's Church. Interment will be at the Catholic cemetery.

Mr. Brown passed away late Friday afternoon at a hospital in Placerville to which he had been admitted earlier last week. His state of consciousness was not such that details concerning his life could be learned by hospital attendants.

It is reported that Mr. Brown had been employed in ranch work in the county.

Known survivors include a sister, Mrs. James Reid, of Toledo, O. Memory Chapel is in charge.
